

Sep-timber is the time for trees!

When is the best time for planting trees? Now!!

Fall is absolutely, hands-down, the best time to plant trees. The cooling temperatures and shortening daylight hours signal to the tree to enter its root-building phase. During this phase, all energy is being sent to the roots, so the tree isn't worried about growing new leaves or branches. The tree then has time to establish new roots before winter comes, during which time it will become dormant. The rule of thumb is to be in the ground at least six weeks before the ground freezes.

Here in Indiana, the ground freezes in January, so there's plenty of time for your new trees to dig into their new homes. During the root-building phase, you will not fertilize the tree, but rather use a Root Stimulator to help the tree develop a more vigorous root system. The cooler temperatures are also less stressful to newly planted trees and shrubs, and the gentle rains that come in fall help roots absorb moisture.

Featured Houseplant:

This week's featured houseplant is the Osaka Bird's Nest Fern! This extra-curly fern loves medium light and higher humidity (frequent misting will help it to thrive!) It likes to be watered every 5-7 days from the bottom as to avoid rotting in its crown. Its rippled fronds will add a touch of whimsy and creativity to any room!

Upcoming Classes:

- September 30th, any time between 11am-1pm: Kids' Pumpkin Painting
